

NEUJOBS book launch – Programme

Let's get to Work! The Future of Labour in Europe

Brussels, 8 September 2014

12.30 – 14.30 pm

Work is not only an essential part of our daily lives, but also one of the top policy concerns across Europe. Unfortunately, the public debate of labour issues is all too often driven by political rhetoric and short-term concerns. In the context of the NEUJOBS FP7 project, scholars from seven European countries bring together in an edited volume what the research findings from various social sciences mean for the future of labour in Europe. Their findings, written down in an easily accessible language, are addressed not only to policymakers, business persons, fellow academics and journalists, but to anyone interested in the shape, size and character of the labour markets of tomorrow and beyond.

Moderator: Terry Martin, Journalist & communications advisor

12.30 Lunch

13.15 Let's get to Work! The Future of Labour in Europe: key messages from the book
Miroslav Beblavy, Centre for European Policy Studies (CEPS)

13.30 Discussion introduced by:
Günther Schmid, Wissenschaftszentrum Berlin für Sozialforschung (WZB)
Representative of the Italian Presidency of the Council of the EU (tbc)

13.50 Conclusions
Tom Bevers, Chairman of the Employment Committee of the European Union

14.00 Plenary discussion (Q&A)

Practical information

Date: Monday 8 September 2014, 12.30 – 14.30 pm

Venue: Centre for European Policy Studies (CEPS), Place du Congrès 1, 1000 Brussels

Online registration: <http://www.ose.be/event080914/index.htm>

If you are interested in participating, please register as soon as possible. Transport and accommodation costs are not covered by the organisers.

Programme and NEUJOBS website: <http://www.neujobs.eu/events/all>

Contact: European Social Observatory, rue Paul Emile Janson 13, BE-1050 Brussels –
Phone: +322/537 19 71, Françoise Verri: verri@ose.be