

Brexit: what are the implications for climate and energy policy in the EU?

15th September, 2016

11:00 – 13 :00, followed by sandwich lunch

Venue:

CEPS, Place du Congrès 1, B-1000 Brussels

Agenda

There has been an avalanche of reports and opinions on Brexit. This CEPS Energy Climate House (ECH) meeting will feature a stakeholder discussion on practical implications of Brexit on energy and climate. Recent and on-going work from CEPS and ECH will inform the debate alongside other panellists.

10:30 Registration and coffee

11:00 Welcome and introduction

Christian Egenhofer, Director CEPS Energy Climate House (ECH)

The introduction will feature a short presentation of the forthcoming energy and climate programme with special emphasis on climate.

11:15 Panel discussion on the energy and climate dimension of Brexit

Introductions by:

- Michael Emerson, Associate Senior Research Fellow, CEPS
- Alistair McGirr, European Affairs Manager, SSE
- Milan Elkerbout, Researcher, CEPS ECH
- Jonathan Gaventa, Director Energy Union, E3G
- Dirk Buschle, Deputy Director, Energy Community and Energy Chair, College of Europe
- Emmanuel Brutin, Head of European Affairs, National Grid

Open discussion

12:45 Wrap-up and next steps

Christian Egenhofer, Director CEPS Energy Climate House (ECH)

13:00 Sandwich Lunch

CEPS commentary by Milan Elkerbout: <https://www.ceps.eu/publications/brexit-and-climate-policy-political-choices-will-determine-future-eu-uk-cooperation>